GOVERNMENT OF CANADA – INDIGENOUS SERVICES CANADA URBAN PROGRAMMING FOR INDIGENOUS PEOPLES (UPIP)

DESCRIPTION: UPIP is designed to assist First Nations (status and non-status), Inuit and Métis living in or transitioning to urban centres. An urban centre is considered to be an urban area having a population of at least 1,000 people and a population density of no fewer than 400 people per square kilometre. Funding is also available for organizations that serve rural and northern areas that act as hubs for those living on reserves or in smaller northern settlements.

Funding Streams

UPIP has four streams of funding:

- Organizational Capacity: This stream offers core funding for up to five years to Indigenous organizations that deliver programs or services to urban Indigenous peoples. Core funding covers the day-to-day operating costs of an organization, like staffing of key positions, utilities, rent, etc.
- Programs and Services: This stream provides project funding for up to five years to organizations that deliver programs and services to Indigenous peoples in urban areas. Projects that focus on these six key areas will be considered for funding: women, vulnerable populations, youth, transition services, outreach programs, community wellness.
- Coalitions: This stream supports local coalitions that bring together all levels of government and other stakeholders that identify key local priorities and needs and ensure efficient and coordinated delivery of urban Indigenous programs. The coalitions will promote local collaboration, identify local needs, and develop local plans on how best to address the priorities. (The funding for this stream will be delivered through targeted calls for proposals.)
- Research and Innovation: This stream provides funding to academics, researchers and organizations in order to: better understand the urban Indigenous reality, gather information on best practices, methodologies and programming approaches, and pilot innovative programs and services to address systemic challenges in new ways

ELIGIBILITY: Each stream of UPIP funding has its own eligibility requirements. Common requirements for all streams include:

- recipients must be located in an urban centre
- all initiatives and projects must advance the objectives of Urban Programming for Indigenous Peoples
- all non-Indigenous organizations, including municipal governments, health and education authorities and institutions, require demonstrated support from Indigenous organizations or Indigenous community groups to be eligible for funding.

GOVERNMENT OF CANADA- DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE SUPPORTING FAMILIES OF MISSING AND MURDERED INDIGENOUS WOMEN AND GIRLS

DESCRIPTION: In Canada, the rate of violent victimization of Indigenous people is more than double that of non-Indigenous people, and the numbers are particularly concerning when it comes to Indigenous women and girls. The causes are many and rooted in the legacy of colonial policies and the intergenerational effects of residential schools.

Investing in specialized victim services that support families of missing and murdered Indigenous women and girls is an important part of the healing journey.

The Department of Justice Canada provides funding for initiatives that support families of missing and murdered Indigenous women and girls: Family Information Liaison Units and funding for community-based organizations that provide culturally-grounded grief and trauma supports for families.

These initiatives are not part of the National Inquiry into Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Girls. The National Inquiry is independent of all levels of government. These initiatives are a response to what we heard during the pre-Inquiry engagement from survivors, families, and loved ones affected by this long-standing national tragedy.

Supporting families of missing and murdered Indigenous women and girls on their healing journey is a priority for the Department of Justice Canada.

This is why we support community-organizations that deliver services for families of missing or murdered Indigenous women and girls. Funding for these activities will help fill gaps where needs are high, building on the work of Indigenous organizations and specialized victim services programs.

The purpose of this investment is to support culturally-responsive, trauma-informed community-based services for families of missing and murdered Indigenous women and girls. Culturally-responsive services for families are those that are grounded in or informed by the various cultures of the families in need of assistance. A trauma-informed approach is grounded in client safety and empowerment. Trauma informed victim service providers are guided by principles of creating a safe space, building trust, supporting client choice, respecting client control, and building on strengths. These principles are integrated into policies, procedures, practices and settings.

Projects funded will address gaps where there are limited supports and services for families. Funding will also be available to increase capacity where services are already being provided by Indigenous organizations.

Funding will be linked to the following Victims Fund objectives:

1. Promote access to justice and participation by victims of crime in the justice system;
2. Promote the development of law, policies and programs for victims of crime;
3. Promote the implementation of principles, guidelines and laws designed to address the needs of victims of crime and articulate the victim's role in the criminal justice system;
4. Increase knowledge and awareness of the impact of victimization, the needs of victims of crime, available services, assistance and programs, and relevant legislation;
5. Encourage governmental and non-governmental organizations to identify victim needs and gaps in services, and develop and deliver programs, services and assistance to victims of crime; and/or,
6. Promote capacity-building within non-governmental organizations.

ELIGIBILITY

- Indigenous community organizations,
- non-governmental organizations
- provincial and territorial victim services

Applications considered for funding will:

- Provide direct support to family members of missing or murdered Indigenous women to assist them with their grief and trauma;
- Demonstrate that the services and support to be provided will be culturally-responsive;
- Demonstrate that the services and support to be provided will be trauma-informed;
- Demonstrate that the applicant organization has links and partnerships at the community level; and,
- Demonstrate that the organization has well-established connections with the families and individuals they are proposing to serve.

NORTHERN AND ABORIGINAL CRIME PREVENTION FUND

DESCRIPTION: The Northern and Aboriginal Crime Prevention Fund (NACPF) assists communities experiencing multiple risk factors and other challenges that affect their ability to respond to crime issues, such as remote geographical location and limited capacity. In order to effect positive changes in risk and protective factors and foster crime prevention in Northern and Aboriginal communities, the NACPF will support:

- the adaptation, development and implementation of innovative and promising culturally sensitive crime prevention practices which address known risk and protective factors to reduce offending among at-risk children and youth, and high risk offenders in communities;
- the dissemination of knowledge and the development of tools and resources for Aboriginal and northern populations;
- capacity building as a means to explore ways to develop or implement culturally sensitive crime prevention practices among Aboriginal and northern populations.

DESCRIPTION: Freehorse Family Wellness Society (FFWS) administers the Post-Secondary Funding Program on behalf of Indigenous and Northern Affairs Canada (INAC). This program is run according to the Post-Secondary Student Support Program and UCEPP Policies and the Department of Indian and Northern Affairs Development (DIAND). The Post-Secondary Funding Program assists students who have regained their status as a result of Bill C-31 from various Alberta First Nations, and students who are residents of Alberta with Northwest Territories or Inuit Treaty Status. FFWS is committed to providing quality administration of the Post-Secondary Funding Program. For us, this means continuous improvement of our service while working within the guidelines of both policy and budgetary restrictions. Within these parameters, the staff of the Post-Secondary Funding Program strives to administer a program that is fair, equitable, and balanced, while considering individual student needs. The delivery of the program is based on policies and procedures that were originally set forth by INAC when the program was first contracted to FFWS. However, we do have to, from time to time, modify procedures to accommodate the changes in educational trends.
