INTRODUCTION TO MATRIMONIAL REAL PROPERTY LAW FOR HOUSING MANAGERS

This three part webinar was delivered by K. McCue. A summary of the webinar follows:

We at the First Nations Housing Professionals Association (FNHPA) are well aware that laws, particularly relatively new ones, can be difficult to wrap one's head around. We also know that housing professionals have a number of laws, not to mention by-laws and policies, to review, understand and implement. The task can be daunting. But the association is committed to helping housing professionals fulfil their responsibilities – our Knowledge Centre, our FNHP Program, and our workshops and webinars are each designed to increase your knowledge of a particular subject, and ultimately increase your effectiveness and impact in your First Nation.

This particular webinar examines matrimonial real property law. Matrimonial real property is land held by one or both spouses or common-law partners that is used by the family. It may include houses, sheds, and any other structure that is securely attached to the land. Personal property, on the other hand, refers to movable assets like cars, furniture, cash, etc.

The Family Homes on Reserves and Matrimonial Interests or Rights Act (FHRMIRA) was enacted to ensure that those living on reserves have similar rights and protections as other Canadians when it comes to the family home and the division of interests or rights. Under the Act, First Nations can elect to enact their own matrimonial real property law to replace the provisional Federal rules. The legislation applies only to structures located on reserve land, in particular, the structure in which the couple habitually resided until they ceased living together.

The goal of the Act is to help spouses and partners determine what they are entitled to when it comes to lands, the family home and other structures when a marriage or relationship ends or upon the death of a party.

This 3-part webinar is designed to help housing professionals understand the Act and assist their First Nation in proper implementation. Your housing knowledge is required to provide technical guidance on housing policy and the provisions contained in housing agreements.
